MY SPACE... YOUR SPACE!

Maybe you're throwing a party, a really BIG party, and need a room that'll wow your guests. Or are you walking down the aisle and need a place to cut the cake? Maybe you just need a meeting of the minds in a quiet, conducive environment away from the maddening crowd.

Midtown has the answer with three out-of-the-ordinary rental spaces, each perfect for your gathering —be it 2,000 or 20.

House of Deréon Media Center

U of H Small Business Development Center

University of Houston Small Business Development Center

The unpretentious Bank of America building at 2302 Fannin Street is not just another Midtown edifice. The entire second floor is a business owner's dream come true; a sleek, custom training facility complete with amenities that exceed the expectations of today's discriminating leaders.

The University of Houston Small Business Development Center is a nonprofit organization and extension of the Bauer College of Business. Empowering owners, employees and fledgling entrepreneurs for 24 years, the organization provides business consulting, training and the brand new, fully equipped meeting spaces poised for your next event.

By utilizing state-of-the-art video conferencing, meetings in two cities are held simultaneously via a sizeable digital video projection system; curtailing your cost for business travel.

Are you holding a seminar or instructing employees? The large training room accommodates up to 90 people. Attention spans may improve as guests settle comfortably into the ergonomic seating. Not a large group? The small training room with a 20 to 40-seat capacity is perfect. Do you lack space to entertain prospects? The executive conference room is your professional option, seating up to 22 people. Two computer labs with flat panel monitors and wireless Internet round out the selections.

Best of all, Houston, the facilities are here for you to rent. No need to gather in cramped quarters or pay costly expenditures for a build-out. Now you can treat your staff or associates to a pleasurable, educational experience in a refreshing environment.

Incentives abound. A chief location, on-site security, catering control and in this penny-pinching economy... free parking!

"Many industry groups rent our facilities," shares Toni Langlinais, staff business development specialist. "Companies that provide direct mail marketing, tax services, technology, and transportation are just a few. Non profits and women's groups are popular also."

For rates and a tour of the facility, call Toni at 713-752-8446 and make your company's next meeting or training session a memorable one.
